There was a time when the democratic party offered $10,000 for the head of Ben Butler. The party can make $10,000 pretty easily now if they want a little campaign fund.

The Inter Ocean tells how a Cincinnati girl made $350,000 by an oil transaction in one night. A lamp exploded and killed her rich aunt.

"Old cases of matrimony" do not seem to take well in different parts of the country. The courts are breaking the bonds with alarming rapidity. Over a thousand divorces will be granted in the western states this fall.

Governor Rusk has issued commissions to A. F. Caldwell as captain of the Custer Rifles, of Whitewater, vice Wm. DeWolf, resigned, and to J. C. Walton as second lieutenant of the same company, vice A. F. Caldwell, promoted.

The railway war on passenger rates is still going on, with no prospect of a change. Rates between St. Paul and Milwaukee and Chicago, and between Omaha and St. Paul have been put down to one dollar, but the companies are careful not to sell you a round trip ticket between these points for two dollars.

It is said by the Milwaukee Republican-Sentinel that the newly-elected governor of Michigan, J. W. Begole, has never been a democrat. He was a republican up to 1877, then joined the greenback party, in which he has remained. He was first nominated by the greenbackers for governor, and subsequently endorsed by the democrats. There is no accounting for the political taste of people this year. It is about time that the public should not be surprised at anything when Massachusetts shall make Ben Butler governor and Michigan elect a greenbacker.

Complete official returns give the following vote for congressman in the first district:

| Counties. | Williams. | Williams. | Blackman. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Jefferson | 3,232 | 1,904 | 458 |
| Kenosha | 1,320 | 1,289 | 45 |
| Racine | 2,975 | 2,349 | 324 |
| Rock | 2,372 | 3,075 | 725 |
| Walworth | 1,889 | 2,612 | 652 |
| Total | 12,307 | 11,349 | 2,201 |

Williams' plurality, 958.

Some four weeks before the election we placed the prohibition vote in the district at 2,200, and how the other four votes got in is a mystery. But people generally were greatly surprised that the vote was not larger. As to the other, the result is astonishing, at least for a republican district like old first, which prided itself in being a political Gibraltor so far as its republicanism was concerned.

The Evening Wisconsin says in an editorial paragraph:

Charles G. Williams says he is cheerful and will go to work and make some money. No new man can at once fully take Mr. Williams' place as representative in congress from the first district.

If Mr. Williams had been like many other members of congress, he wouldn't have to look about for work by which he could make money. He would have made his money while in congress, so that when he came out he would be above the touch of want. But Mr. Williams, like Nathaniel P. Banks, and Charles Sumner, and that class of men, found no riches in a congressional seat, which is the best evidence in the world that he is honest—not using his seat in the house of representatives for the sole benefit of his private interests.

It now turns out, as predicted by the Gazette two months ago, that Engineer Melville's wife is not insane. At that time we charged her strange actions to his cruelty, and an examination into her case by a board of physicians, showed that she was not insane at the time she was incarcerated. Melville was brutally cruel to her immediately on his return from the Jeannette expedition, and this brought about her broken heart and singular conduct. She has been released from the asylum.

One of the most remarkable men of his day—Thurlow Weed—is dead. As an adroit politician and an influential journalist, he did not have a superior in this country. His death takes away the last member of that once great and powerful political firm—Seward, Weed & Greeley. It was the greatest political triumvirate this country ever had when they were unanimous, but when Horace Greeley dissolved the firm because he thought the others members had not used him right, their influence was gone. Seward died in October 1872, Greeley in November 1872 and ten years later took away the eldest of them all. We publish an interesting account of the life services of Thurlow Weed in another part of this issue.

There was a meeting of an association called the Wisconsin state christian association at Oshkosh, the other day, which had for its object the beginning of a war against secret societies. They elected officers and concluded to expose the secrets, so far as they know them, of the different secret organizations in this country. The word "christian" seems to be out of place when connected with this association. It is more than likely that one will find that a majority of the men in this movement are dead-beats. They were probably not moral and honest enough to make good Masons or Odd Fellows, and were kicked out for the best of reasons, and then began their war against these societies. Any man who will solemnly bind himself to keep inviolate a sacred obligation, and then attempt to expose the secrets of the order before a public audience, is beneath the notice of honest men. They would dishonor any church to which they belonged, and would bring contempt upon the religion they professed.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 23.—The story of Douglas R. Hale and wife, who have been under arrest here since Monday, charged with stealing jewelry from the stores of O. L. Rosenkranz & Co., and Stanley & Camp, is one of the most peculiar and pitiable in the annals of crime. Until September of last year Hale was the trusted manager of the Chicago clearing-house. He is of good family, and moved in the highest circles of that city. He lost his clearing-house position because of the scandal growing out of his second marriage to the woman who is now under arrest here. In 1878 his house in Chicago was robbed by a celebrated burglar, Mike Weaver, of jewelry and laces to the value of $4,000. After Weaver's conviction of the crime, Hale visited him in jail, and Weaver told Hale that Mrs. Weaver, who was then in Michigan, could probably get the property back for him. Hale opened correspondence with Mrs. Weaver, and recovered the property. Hale and his former wife, an invalid, were so much impressed with the apparent honesty of Mrs. Weaver that they invited her to their house, and she was finally established there as the trusted friend of Mrs. Hale. Mrs. Weaver nursed Mrs. Hale through her dying illness, and was afterward retained by Hale as housekeeper. Afterwards he married her. After marrying Hale she was charged with robbing a jewelry store, but the affair was compromised. The arrest at that time caused a tremendous social sensation in Chicago. Later, in September, 1881, Hale lost his position in the clearing house. It was asserted that his account was slightly overdrawn. It may be remarked here that not only is the woman's burglar husband, who was her second matrimonial mate, in the penitentiary, but her sister and sister's husband are also in similar institutions. Hale's infatuation for the woman knew no bounds. So great was his confidence in her that she had been down to his office at the clearing-house, and had held in her hands packages of money and securities amounting to fully $200,000—a statement which may make the hair of some of the careful Chicago bankers stand on end when they reflect on the risk that they narrowly escaped, for undoubtedly, had Mrs. Weaver been so minded, she could have marched off with an amount of money which would have caused them many a heartache. In addition to the business-like administration of the household, she had taken excellent care of the children, who loved her devotedly, and who knew her only as their aunt.

After his arrest here, Mr. Hale was, of course, extremely nervous, but willingly acceded to the request for a private interview, which was arranged for through the courtesy of Chief Watson. Mr. Hale was well dressed, smoked a cigar with the reporter, gradually overcame his nervousness and told his story as clearly as possibly could be expected under the circumstances. Leaving out the story of the old troubles, which are detailed in another place, his statement is as follows:

"You know my history and the story of my former troubles. I ought to say at first that I was married to the lady last May. At the time of our former trouble I was not married. Those statements in the newspapers have ruined me. When I lost my position in the clearing-house I tried everywhere to get work. I went to dozens of my old friends and sought aid. I had the best of letters from prominent bankers, but they were all in vain. I applied for positions at $5 a week. Persons laughed at me. They said I could not take such positions after the one I once had held. I then applied to strangers. I proved my capacity, but the moment they heard my name it was no use. There was no work for me in Chicago because I was Douglas R. Hale. I was driven from the city. I had done nothing wrong, but no one would trust me. I borrowed a few dollars from friends—I do not think I owe over $75 in this way—and attempted to keep my head above water. Everything failed. A dozen times I was given hopes of employment. Each time however, on my second visit there was a change, and I failed. I have lived an honest life, but no one would help me to continue it. Things kept getting worse and worse. We had to leave, and went to Kenosha. There were days when there was not a crust of bread in the house. We were utterly hopeless, but still we were honest."

"Why did you come to Milwaukee?"

"Mr. Bigelow, of the First National bank here, had given me hopes of employment. Yesterday—no, Monday—my God, have I lost track of the days!—Monday I came up here with my wife. She carried her shawl and wore the sealskin. After I had seen Mr. Bigelow we went to the Newhall house together for dinner. In the afternoon I went to see about employment again, and left her to go to the train alone. When I got to the depot she refused to speak to me, gave me a wave of the hand and said, 'Don't speak to me.' I thought it was a family jar, believing she felt huffy over my losing late to the train. She went to one end of the car, and I dropped into a seat at the other end of the car. I noticed two men speaking about her, and became interested. When the train arrived at Elizabeth street I saw she was taken off. I was completely bewildered. In an instant it flashed over me that in some way the old trouble had been revived. When the train stopped at Bay View I got off and came to town on a horse-car. I had not a cent, and pawned the sealskin which I still had on my arm for $4. I then secured an attorney, and while I was waiting for him I was arrested by two detectives. When brought to the station I was ordered to turn up the jewelry. They said my wife was arrested for larceny. I did not even know the nature of the charge until this morning. What she had done I knew nothing of. I did not see any jewelry, nor did I know she had been to any jewelry stores."

"Do you know that your wife has confessed everything?"

"I have been told so, and when I heard it I was thunderstruck. I don't know yet what to believe."

"Are you convinced of her guilt now?"

"For God's sake don't ask me that. I couldn't answer you that. O, if you knew the trials we have gone through, the temptations we have withstood, and the bitter days when we have suffered for food, you could now understand my feelings. I am innocent of all wrongdoing, and can honestly say that I never did a dishonest act in my life. I know nothing of the jewelry. I pity my poor wife. I am innocent myself. I haven't a cent in the world. My friends have gone back on me; I am forsaken."

Mr. Hale was visibly affected when the interview closed, and went back to his cell with bowed head and trembling hands. He said he had been well treated by the police authorities, and believed they were only holding him until the matter was cleared up. He was confident that he would be ultimately released, and persisted in his denial of all.

Mrs. Hale was brought from her cell to the chief's private office, where a reporter had a lengthy interview with her. She showed plainly the evidence of her recent troubles. Her face was careworn, her eyes were red with tears, and her bosom heaved with convulsive sobs and gasps as she related her truly touching and pathetic story. With none of the determined silence displayed when the reporter last saw her in the county jail in Chicago, she talked as freely as her sobs and emotion would permit.

"There is nothing for me to say," she began in a low tone, "except that I have fallen. I am guilty, and I must take the consequences. I have done wrong, and O, how I repent it! Most of all I feel for my husband. He was just on the point of getting employment, and now I have brought him down again. I hope when he gets out of that he will cut loose from me and never attempt to see me again. It is worse to have a wife bring a husband down than to have the husband lower the wife. I have seen both. My first husband drank himself to death. My second husband was terrible. Did you never know his business? He told me he was on the board of trade. Then he told me he played cards to excuse his being out nights. I thought that was terrible, but when Mike Weaver was arrested for burglary I was almost insane. I ran out of the house without a place to go. I was beside myself. For two days I wandered around, and two nights I slept in the open woods north of Lincoln park. Then I walked down to the police station and asked Chief Seavey if he wanted me. He did not, and I was free, but I was just as much homeless. I met Mrs. Hale, and was a friend to her. After she died I was faithful to her children, and began to be happy, until that other trouble came. Until that came we were happy, and lived a quiet, honest, upright, virtuous life. When that trouble came everything darkened again. We had not a cent in the world. When Mr. Hale left the clearing-house we had just $2. First Mr. Hale's watch was sold, then I pawned my sealskin, then my shawl went. There was no work for either of us. I have been thirty-six hours without a morsel of food, and have gone without breakfast, dinner and supper to give the two children a little supper, a bit of bread and milk. In spite of all I was honest, and never felt even tempted to do wrong. I had to sell the watch which Mrs. Hale left me in her will. Everything was gone. When we came up here yesterday I had some money which belonged to my mother. I owed her more, and she was pressing me for it. I was passing a jewelry-store when I saw the beautiful things there. I went in, and the impulse to steal came over me in a minute. I formed the plan as I stood at the counter, and I took the pins. When I saw how easy it was I tried another place. I only took things from two places. When I got to the depot I saw I was followed, and threw the things into the stove. I was almost out of my head, and knew I must suffer. I have done wrong, and must be punished. My husband is innocent of even the slightest suspicion of wrong. It is I alone who have brought this upon him, and terrible thoughts cross my mind when I think of what I have done."

"Were you also guilty of stealing the diamond from the jewelry store in Chicago?"

"I was innocent, as God is my judge. I don't know how that happened, but now I suppose that will be laid up against me. When I went into the store here the thought came over me that I would now do what I had once been wrongfully accused of doing. I was innocent then, and am guilty now. Last night I denied it all, but when I was alone in my cell I thought it over, and in the morning I couldn't have denied it to save myself from instant death."

In conclusion, Mrs. Hale announced her intention of pleading guilty. She was resigned to imprisonment, and was anxious only about the fate of her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Hale have been living in Kenosha in a little room, without a carpet on the floor, and have been but little known in the place. The daughter of Mr. Hale is at school in Rockford, and the boy Robert, is living at Kenosha with Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Hale's mother.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 24.—Hale and his wife were brought before Judge Mallory in the municipal court at the close of the usual round of assorted drunks and vagrancies. Mrs. Hale appeared in court veiled. She looked eminently respectable and decorous, being dressed in a plain black dress, with no attempt to display. Her dark hair was neatly arranged, and she had anything but the look of a shop-lifter. Her rather plain face was red from the effects of weeping, and she shrank into a corner beside her counsel almost unnoticed. Hale was well-dressed, but looked haggard and worn. His eyes glanced nervously around from behind his glasses, his hands shook, and his voice was choked. His face was pale and haggard. Mrs. Hale waved examination, and was held in default of $300 bonds, the value of the stolen articles having been placed at about $85. Mr. Hale's attorney insisted on an immediate trial for him, but as the district attorney was engaged in another case the prosecution secured a continuance from day to day. The police do not seem to claim anything but inferential evidence against Hale, and he will doubtless be discharged. His bail was fixed at $300, but he was of course unable to raise the amount, and went back to jail in default. Through an arrangement with the district attorney and chief of police they were allowed to occupy quarters at the central station instead of at the county jail. Hale said that he did not propose to desert his wife, but would use all his efforts when he got out to securing the utmost possible mitigation of her sentence.

Hale has made ineffectual efforts all day to secure the $300 bail imposed by the court this morning. He hoped to secure the aid of Mr. Bigelow, the banker, and an old friend, but the messenger sent to see Mr. Bigelow returned with a very emphatic answer to the effect that he would have nothing to do with the case. Your correspondent spent a half-hour with Hale last night at the cell at the police station in which he is locked up. He is much disappointed at the refusal to furnish bail on the part of those whom he thought he had reason to believe his friends. When told that some doubts had been expressed as to the fact that he was really married, and asked in regard to his union with his present wife, and requested to state when and where the ceremony took place, he at first replied that his private family affairs had nothing to do with the occasion of his present trouble, and that no good could come to him or anybody else from raking up questions connected with his past relations with this woman, who is now his wife. Later, however, he said that if anybody had doubts as to the fact that he was legally married, he would state that the marriage ceremony between himself and his wife took place on the 14th day of last March, and that if necessary he could furnish his marriage certificate in evidence of the truth of his statement on twenty-four hours' notice. He declined to state where the marriage took place, but said the ceremony was performed in private, in the presence of a few witnesses, by an Episcopal clergyman.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Ring Out the Wild-Bells—The Theories of Darwin.

"RING OUT, WILD BELLS." By Alfred Tennyson. Illustrated. Boston: Lee and Shepard, publishers. Price $1.50.

Messrs. Lee & Shepard have issued a pretty series of holiday books in the line of illustrated poems, and the present one is Tennyson's well-known and oft-quoted New Year's song which has been fitly illustrated by Miss L. B. Humphrey, in a series of fifteen drawings, which have been engraved by Andrew. The illustrations give additional force and beauty to the lines, and the book being issued in the best of style, it makes one of the most suitable volumes for presentation issued this season.

For sale by James Sutherland & Sons, Janesville.

THE THEORIES OF DARWIN, AND THEIR RELATION TO PHILOSOPHY, RELIGION AND MORALITY. By Rudolph Schmid, President of the Theological Seminary at Schoenthal, Germany. With introduction by the Duke of Argyle. Translated from the German by G. A. Zimmermann. Published by Jansen, McClurg & Co. Price, cloth, $2.00.

While the author does not admit that all the claims of the evolutionists are established laws, he writes to show that the conflict between the most advanced science and revealed religion is only apparent. Dr. Schmid claims that all truths must agree with each other, and even finds in the bible account of the creation a hint to the discoveries of Darwin and his disciples. It would require the exercise of the same power to evolve man through the lower animal forms, that it would to make him immediately from the dust of the earth. He claims that the manifestations of supernatural power during the life of Christ are no more improbable than scores of what the scientists claim to be undoubted truths—no analogy of either having been seen by living man. To believe that man, "the image of God," should have descended from a soulless beast, requires much more credulity, than to accept the well-attested miracle of the return of the breath of life to the body of Christ.

To those who have feared modern science to be an opponent of their religion, this will be an acceptable volume.

For sale by the publishers and by Jas. Sutherland & Sons, Janesville.

THURLOW WEED.

Death of the Veteran Statesman, Journalist and Politician,

In the Presence of His Children, Grandchildren and the Attaches of His Household.

A Long, Useful and Honorable Life Brought to a Peaceful Close.

Interesting Sketch of the Career of the "Nestor of the Press" and the "Warwick of Politics."

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Surrounded by his weeping children, grand children, physicians, nurses and attaches of his household, Thurlow Weed, the veteran journalist and statesman, breathed his last at 8:55 yesterday morning. His daughter, Miss Harriet Weed, who has devoted her life to her father was so overcome that she had to be supported by two female attendants. The grief of the other children was none the less poignant. Just before passing away Mr. Weed groped with his right hand around the bed, as though he sought his children's hands. His granddaughter took the extended hand, felt a soft pressure, and the next moment he was dead. Those who were present at the final moment were his daughter Harriet, Mrs. Barnes and children, Mrs. Alden and daughter, Miss Ingman, and Mr. Green, Frederick Seward, Dr. Chadbourne, and ex-Ald. Van Schaick. All through the night the patient remained in an unconscious condition, and laid on his couch as though gently sleeping. His pulse was scarcely perceptible, and at times it was difficult to tell whether he was living or dead. Toward daylight he seemed to rouse himself slightly and uttered a few words, but at once sank back into his former condition. "He passed away just like a child dropping to sleep," said Frederick W. Seward. "His breathing was soft, and there was a sweet smile on his face." Among the persons who called this morning, and were received by Mr. Seward, who accepted their condolences on the part of Mr. Weed's family, were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Lansing, James Otis, James Talcott, Frederick A. Conkling, Fred S. Follett, E. B. Benjamin, P. Redington Stetson, Abram Wakeman, Rev. Dr. C. D. Bridgman, Miss Kate Pattison, Miss Emily Faithful, C. L. Skeels, William Dey Baughton, C. C. Clark, and Mr. Lounsbury, of Albany. A number of letters and telegrams were also received. The funeral will be held either in the First Presbyterian church, Fifth avenue and Twelfth street, or at the residence of the deceased. Rev. Dr. William Paxton will be the officiating clergyman. After the funeral services in this city are concluded the remains will be taken to Albany for burial.

Thurlow Weed was born on Nov. 15, 1797, at Cairo, Greene Co., N. Y., whither his parents had emigrated from Stamford, Conn. He was the son of Joel Weed, a carman, and was named Edward Thurlow, after Edward Lord Thurlow, but the Edward was soon dropped. When about 10 years of age, he became a cabin-boy on board a sloop. He learned to set type in the office of Macky Crosswell at Catskill. During the war of 1812 young Weed was in the army, having enlisted in a Herkimer county regiment under Col. Petrie in 1813. He was shortly afterward made quartermaster sergeant, and spent several months in camp life at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y. After the war he was employed in various offices in Franklin square and Pearl street in New York, at one time being a fellow-workman with James Harper, the late head of the great publishing house. In April, 1818, Mr. Weed married Miss Catharine M. Ostrander, of Cooperstown, N. Y., a woman of remarkably good sense and prudence, industry, religious principles, and domestic habits. His first connection with the press as an editor was in Chenango county, where he started The Weekly Republican Agriculturist in December, 1818. It was Clintonian in politics, and supported the project of constructing the Erie canal. In 1821 he purchased an interest in The Manlius Times, which he sold out a year or two later. Going to Rochester he secured the position of assistant editor on The Rochester Telegraph. In 1824 he represented the city of Rochester in the state legislature. During his service in the legislature he displayed the skill for political manipulation which characterized his after-life. Returning to Rochester he became editor and half owner of The Telegraph, whose circulation and influence was steadily increasing. The mysterious disappearance of Captain William Morgan, and the anti-Masonic craze which followed the alleged Masonic murder suddenly became important factors in Mr. Weed's life. He took the anti-Masonic side, and in the height of the excitement The Telegraph went down through the withdrawal of all Masonic support. Mr. Weed's tact as a party manager and his services in 1826 in securing the election of DeWitt Clinton as governor, suggested him as a competent person to oppose the "Albany regency," composed of such men as Van Buren, Wright, Marcy, Dix, Flagg and other leading members of the Democratic party, which, with The Albany Argus as the organ, was the controlling power, and The Albany Evening Journal was established with Weed as editor. There was a growing opposition to the regency and the Jackson administration, and the political problem was to combine the scattered elements. To this work, involving many months of consultations and journeyings, Weed addressed himself, and by the spring of 1834 the nucleus of the new party, called the Whig, had been formed. It at once took firm foothold in New England, overthrowing the Jackson party there during the very first year of its organization. The panic of 1837, growing out of the financial and commercial policy of Jackson and Van Buren, as was claimed, gave the Whigs the wished-for opportunity of overthrowing the regency and securing control of New York. In 1838 Seward and Bradish, the Whig candidates, were elected governor and lieutenant governor, and the Whigs had a majority in the state assembly. So accustomed had the party grown to rely on the guidance of The Evening Journal and its editor that the politicians of the state were in constant consultation with Mr. Weed, who was already called "the Dictator," "the Warwick," "the Old Man," etc. It is doubtful if any one ever had such complete control of a party or had his advice so implicitly followed by its members as Mr. Weed in his relation to the Whig party. The great secret of his sway undoubted was his disinterestedness. He sought no office himself and would take none. He preferred to be the power behind the throne rather than the semblance of power on the throne. He was repeatedly urged to run for offices, ranging from vice president down to mayor of Albany, but invariably declined. Three times he was offered the English mission by three different presidents whom he had helped elect. He was prominent in procuring the presidential nominations of Harrison, Taylor and Scott. He warmly advocated the election of Fremont in 1856 and Lincoln in 1860. In 1861 he was sent to Europe by President Lincoln in a semi-diplomatic capacity. On his return from Europe in 1862 the gratitude of New York for what he had done for his country took the shape of a formal presentation to him of the freedom of the city, and several of his more intimate friends united in presenting him with a costly memorial in silver, which is one of the most precious heirlooms in the family.

In January, 1863, Mr. Weed dissolved his connection with The Albany Journal, both as editor and proprietor. During the summer and autumn of 1863 the rebellion assumed an aspect which occasioned Mr. Weed great solicitude. The consequence was that he worked out a plan, after long reflection, by the adoption of which he believed the war could not only be more vigorously prosecuted, but speedily ended. He went to Washington and laid the plan before the president, but it was not adopted. Since the close of the war Mr. Weed has lived in New York, and for a time edited The Commercial Advertiser. He has maintained a lively interest in all public questions, and has frequently favored the metropolitan press with his views on the topics of the day and with reminiscences. In 1872 he returned to active politics for a brief time, and secured the nomination of Gen. John A. Dix by the Republican state convention for governor. The wisdom of his selection was demonstrated by the triumphant election of the whole Republican ticket. On March 22, 1880, he once more assumed the editorship of The Journal—for one day—on the occasion of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation.

He leaves three daughters, Mrs. William Barnes, of Albany, N. Y.; Mrs. James Alden, of Morrisania, N. Y., and Miss Harriet Weed, who has been his constant companion since the death of his wife, about thirty years ago. He leaves an estate estimated at over $1,000,000.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Daily News, in an editorial on the late Thurlow Weed, says: He was a type of the American politician, not a statesman, but a politician of the foremost rank and of the first influence. His death leaves no particular gap, but he will be remembered in politics longer than greater men.

THE PROVIDENCE FIRE.

The Strictest Investigation to be Instituted into the Cause of the Disaster.

An Account of the Terrible Alternative Presented to Two Girls in the Burning Building.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 23.—The strictest investigation into the cause of Tuesday's terrible fire is to be made, and every effort will made, and every effort be used to fix the blame for the loss of life upon those persons to whom it justly belongs. Great care has been taken in the selection of competent and intelligent men to sit on the coroner's jury, and the result has been that Coroner Palmer has now the best jury that was ever impaneled in this city.

After taking the oath the jury viewed the bodies of the two young girls, Bessie Cobb and Emma Gassett, who were killed by jumping from the fourth story of the burning building, which are now lying in the morgue at the central police station. The jury then visited the scene of the fire, and inspected the spot where the poor girls fell, and from there ascending to the upper part of the building, examining each floor on the way. After ordering diagrams made of the building and its interior arrangements, they adjourned to the justice court room, where testimony will be taken.

Those seriously injured number seventeen. Delia Gassett, whose death was erroneously reported, being still alive, though sure to die. Charles T. Melvin, the dyer, in whose place the fire originated, states that a large cylinder about eight feet long by three in diameter, which was located in the front room of his dye-house on the third floor, was out of repair and he had a plumber there at work fixing it. This plumber was on his knees soldering the cylinder at the end. An open gasoline stove stood near for the purpose of heating his irons. Mr. Melvin stood at a sink about fifteen feet distant, and was in the act of cleansing a garment with naphtha when all at once there came a rush of flame like a flash of lightning, which surged around his head—a perfect cloud of fire—and his hands being wet with the naphtha, were nearly burned. Above the sink the woodwork was saturated with grease, and instantaneously it was all ablaze, while the naphtha in the pan was a sheet of flame. Mr. Melvin says he then seized a piece of carpeting and called on the plumber to catch hold and help him. He tried to put out the blaze, but the plumber turned and ran, and Mr. Melvin alone could not smother the flames. At the same time he summoned a boy to tell the engineer to sound an alarm on account of the fire. When the firemen arrived Mr. Melvin says he put his head out of the window and directed the firemen how to work, telling them that the fire was confined to one corner of the room, and they could soon put it out. But they apparently paid no heed to his instructions. While the firemen were getting ready to turn on a stream Mr. Melvin says he ran up stairs to the upper story and found the door of Robinson's room shut, and the smoke then becoming very dense and suffocating, he descended to the floor below. He feels positive that at this time the people in Robinson's place could have escaped had they tried, and he says that he then supposed they had all escaped, as he had been so informed. Had he not thought so, he says he would never have left the building until they were saved. Mr. J. P. Baker, one of the employes of Robinson's shop on the floor below, says that the people in the shop could not go through the entry and down the stairs, because of the smoke and fire, and for the very same reason they could not get out into the entry and use the ladder fire escapes leading to the roof. The doors were all shut to keep out the smoke and to kill the draught. The girls were all on the benches in front of the windows, and were ready to be taken out as soon as the extension ladder was put up. Mr. Baker, his daughter and two girls were at a window, one of the girls being Bessie Cobb, a handsome and vivacious young miss. They saw the hook and ladder truck drive up, a ladder was placed up against the side of the building, the top of it, much to their dismay, reaching a point three feet below the window-sill. Then they watched the efforts of the ladder men to raise the big extension ladder, and wondered if they would ever get out of the place alive. The minutes seemed like hours. Suddenly the flames burst into the room and across it like a flash of lightning. The time had come when those in the room were given the choice of one of two things, with only an instant to choose which end of the dilemma they were to take. On the one hand was sure death by flame; on the other was a slim chance for life by jumping to the ground. Mr. Baker took Miss Cobb by the hands and swung her out of the window, and as he thought to the ladder. He then passed his own daughter out and looking down through the smoke he was horrified to see that the girls had fallen. Miss Cobb struck first, and from the blood on Miss Baker's cloak it is presumed that she fell upon Miss Cobb's body, thereby breaking her fall and escaping instant death. Then Mr. Baker swung himself out of the window to avoid the flames, which had now reached him and were licking his hands as he let go, and dropped upon the ladder, reaching the ground without further accident. Assistant Engineer Skinner, of the fire department asserts that the firemen never displayed more energy, and Capt. White of the Skinner truck says that the ladders were in first-class condition, and that his entire command devoted all their energies to save the people, and only struggled with the fire when every person was out of the building. He raised all his ladders to the building immediately on arrival, and only when he found they were short did he order the truck to be raised. The general opinion expressed at the fire department headquarters is that the whole mishap was owing to the neglect of the owner of the building in not providing suitable means of escape, and also that a deal of unnecessary time was lost by some person in attempting to extinguish the fire, instead of sounding an alarm immediately.

MISS EMMA BOND.

A Circumstantial Account of the Brutal Assault Given by the Witness.

TAYLORVILLE, Nov. 22.—Miss Emma Bond appeared before the grand jury yesterday to testify as to the criminal assault made upon her last June. Miss Bond was somewhat weakened by her ride of ten miles from her home, the night before, but sufficiently recovered by her night's rest to warrant her appearance before the jury, and about 11 o'clock yesterday she was brought to the court-house and ushered into the grand jury room. She wore a dark maroon dress, very neatly and handsomely trimmed. She was carried to the jury-room in a chair. The people who happened to be aware of her expected appearance, and who stood around waiting her arrival, made way for her passage to the grand jury headquarters, and gazed with interest upon her. She looked pale and weak, though apparently she has not lost very much in flesh. It was decided that her father could not be with her while giving in her evidence to the jury, though it was much desired on account of her feeble condition, and the foreman of the grand jury appeared before the presiding judge, J. J. Phillips, and a long whispered conversation occurred, in which Judge Anthony Thornton and ex-Gov. John M. Palmer joined, and the decision seemed adverse to allowing any one not connected with the jury to attend her while before the jurors. Her examination lasted nearly three hours, when one of her nervous attacks occurred in a violent form, the old paroxysms of pain returning. The physician was hastily summoned, and attendants hastened to and from the court-house securing everything to render the sufferer comfortable, while outside in the corridor and down stairs in the court yard groups of citizens and strangers stood with anxious faces waiting and watching for news of her condition. Every little while could be heard a smothered groan or cry of anguish from the afflicted girl's lips. The grand jury were obliged to adjourn to the sheriff's office, which is on the first floor of the building. During the progress of the examination Miss Bond felt the coming of the paroxysm, and remarked that she would never be able to testify again; that she would not be able to appear at the trial.

Her testimony before the grand jury was straight and connected as to events, commencing at the start and giving a complete account of the dastardly outrage as far as she knows and can remember. Taking into consideration the fact that Miss Bond grew so weak a number of times that she was obliged to rest while her physicians applied restoratives, her recital was clearly and concisely given. While her evidence is not known, it is generally understood that her account of the affair revealed much that has been kept a profound secret, and hitherto not even disclosed outside the Bond family. The remainder of the testimony will not be given for several days. Saturday being set for hearing more witnesses, so there will be no report on the case from the grand jury before next week. Miss Bond will likely remain in the city until after the indictment if any is found, and then if a trial is had at this term, she will not risk another journey over the rough roads to and from her home, but as she is surrounded by every comfort at her cousin's, Abner Bond, who lives just outside the city, she will doubtless extend her visit there until after her evidence is given in court.

Montgomery was in town yesterday. He is interested in pushing the investigation before the grand jury of the particulars of the attempted lynching in which he came so near "going up the flume."

Miss Bond is reported as resting easier, and it is thought that all immediate danger from her attack yesterday is past, and that a little quiet and absolute rest will restore her.

LABOR.

The Trades Congress Adopts a Memorial for an Eight-Hour Law.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 23.—Hugo Miller, of New York, was elected additional secretary, to make a report of the proceedings in German. Judson Grenell, of Michigan; Robert Howard of Massachusetts; Gabriel Edmuston, of the District of Columbia; Samuel Gowpers, of New York, and T. H. Murch, of Maine, were appointed to committee on platform. P. K. Foster, of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution to bind trades organizations to a strict enforcement of the apprenticeship regulations. It was laid over for discussion. Mr. Grenell's resolution, to encourage labor journals and literature, even to free distribution wherever practical, was adopted. The committee on legislation was instructed to urge upon the legislatures of all states the passage of employers' liability laws.

In the afternoon discussion was opened on Foster's paper, "Protection vs. Wages," which was carried on at considerable length. The feeling was quite unanimous, as a resolution striking out of the platform the declaration in favor of protection was carried on a call of the roll by all present except one—Foster, of Cincinnati trades assembly, voting against elimination on instructions from those who sent him. The Chicago memorial for an eight-hour law was taken up and made the sense of the congress. Foster, of Massachusetts, read a resolution favoring a uniform apprentice system, which was opposed by Murch and others. The basis of representation was then changed so that local trades unions that have been organized six months be allowed one delegate on payment of $10 in addition to a per capita tax.

In the evening the delegates attended a mass meeting in the armory, which was addressed by various friends of labor.

The entire force will be suspended for insubordination and new men appointed. The Citizens' corps, a local military company, was put through the emergency tactics last night. Serious trouble is imminent. The whole difficulty arises from the illegal seating of an alderman, whereupon the Democratic members left the council without a quorum and the rump elected two police commissioners, whose authority is disputed.

Put this in your Pipe.

"Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of Zopesa for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with kidney and liver troubles for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of Zopesa. He was so bad at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using Zopesa claims that he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference.

Again, Mrs. Forbes, wife of Mr. R. G. Forbes, Tilsonburg, Ont., through Mr. C. Thomson, druggist, says: "She was ailing for years with Biliousness and Dyspepsia and was reduced to a mere skeleton, but through the use of Zopesa entirely recovered and has gained 38 pounds."

We could present very many such, but have not the time nor space. Zopesa is not a cure-all, but acts directly upon the liver, kidneys, and stomach, correcting the digestion, giving activity to the liver and health to the urine. This corrects the whole system and the blood becomes pure. Sold by Prentice & Evenson.

A Novel Wolf Trap.

Siberian wolves are caught in various ways, sometimes by poisoned bait, and again by traps. One of the commonest kinds of traps now in use is a large circular pen, surrounded by a high wooden fence. Outside of this fence is another similar one, perhaps two or three feet distant from the first, and running entirely around it. In the center of the pen is placed a live deer or pig. In the outer fence is a small opening, the door of which, swing inward, is left conveniently and seductively open. The wolf scents the live bait in the center of the pen, and after vainly endeavoring to leap over the protecting barrier and get at it, finds the door standing open, and at once enters in. The passage between the inner and outer fence is wide enough to allow him to move ahead comfortably, but is too narrow to admit of his turning about.

Once in, he must keep going straight ahead, and very naturally thinking that in this direction lies his prey, he presses on, licking his chops in anticipation of a rich feast. Having completed the circle of his pen, he arrives at his starting point and finds his further progress completely barred by the door which still stands open as when he entered. Pushing against this, he shuts it close in order to get by, and has effectually made himself prisoner. Then the crafty huntsman, who has all the time been concealed within, shoots or spears the animal from the top of the fence, draws his carcass within, so as to save it, and opens the outer door again so as to welcome the next visitor.

When wolves are plenty, two men or more in one of these pens have a very busy time for a number of days, and are scarcely able to slaughter or skin the animals as fast as they would like to rush in unconsciously to their death. It not unfrequently happens that the men are kept in these pens for a number of days at a time, being unable to get out on account of the wolves which surround them, and would tear them to pieces the moment they made their appearance. The only thing for the men to do under such circumstances is to consider themselves in a state of siege and to keep on trapping and slaughtering until the animals, starved out and disappointed, abandon their position and skurry off to another part of the country.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

—Dr. Wiggins, the other weather prophet of Canada, predicts that a tremendous storm will sweep this planet in March, 1883, beginning in the northern Pacific seas, and crossing the meridian of Ottawa at noon of the 11th. India, the south of Europe, England, and especially the North American continent, will be the theater of the ravages. The low lands of the Atlantic will be submerged, and on the ocean, no vessel less than an ocean steamer will be able to live in the tempest. The recent gale that visited this continent was predicted by Dr. Wiggins four months before it came to pass.—Detroit Post.

—A most delightful paradox: Girls are prettiest at all seasons of the year.—New Orleans Picayune.

THE LARGEST and finest assortment of Hair goods ever brought to Janesville, can be seen at Mrs. William Saddlers Opera house block.

FARM AND FIRESIDE.

It is said that if the stems of cut flowers are cut again in the water they will remain much longer fresh.

—Carbolic acid is very useful as a preventive of insect ravages. Radishes may be protected from maggots, and orchards from borers, by its use. A mixture of one part of alcohol and nine parts of crystallized carbolic acid is stated to afford great relief in cases of bites from insects.—Chicago Journal.

—Ducks may be bred in a small pen, where there is merely a tank of water four feet by two, and two feet deep. Many of the eggs, however, will be unfertile. For success on a large scale, a good-sized pool of water is essential. The birds should have the run of a field. Care should be taken not to overfeed breeding ducks, and if early eggs be required, meat diet must be given and warm quarters at night.

—Mothers who have taste, time, and a little skill can make pretty and suggestive things for the baby. Damask spreads for the little bed are lovely if the pattern is outlined with crewel, either blue or pink; choose a pattern with reference to this work. The square patterns are pretty, outlined with little stars in the center. Plain white spreads may be ornamented with a border of buttercups or daisies, or with simply one little carefully careless bunch in one corner. Torchon is not only pretty but durable to trim the pillow-cases for the baby's bed. —N. Y. Post.

—Laying hens or pullets do not require such food as will induce them to acquire a superabundance of fat, for this at a certain stage prevents the production of eggs, rendering the birds sluggish, and disposed to fatal diseases. When the birds are to be fattened for immediate consumption, then strong, fat-producing food is needed, and in liberal quantities. Corn, in its different forms, is the best and cheapest, no doubt, for this purpose, while for laying hens, wheat, wheat-screenings, etc., are preferable, and generally used by successful poultry breeders.—Denver Tribune.

—Puff Paste: Use one pound of butter and one pound of flour. Sift the flour, and then sift into something else a little additional flour for sprinkling and rolling. Wash all the salt from the butter; then divide it into four parts: put one-fourth into the flour, and divide the remainder in six pieces: mix, with a knife, the flour and butter into a stiff dough, sprinkle a little flour over the pasteboard, flour the rolling-pin, and roll into a thin sheet; then put, in little bits, at equal distances, one-sixth of the butter, fold the paste, flour it and roll again, and so on until the butter is consumed. Divide into as many pieces as you wish pies, roll each piece and put into pans previously buttered. Always roll from you.—Germantown Telegraph.

The Hogs.

It is a trifle early yet to think of predicting what the corn crop will be, for although the season has thus far been so unpropitious, in many large sections of the west it is not unusual to get a very satisfactory crop, even when the planting has been done after the middle of June. But appearances certainly indicate that the crop will be far below the average, and if that shall prove to be true, it means that pork will be high. It, therefore, behooves our swine breeders to do all within their power to reap whatever advantage there may be promised. During the summer it costs little to keep the hogs growing and improving, and a little extra care to that end, always profitable, is doubly so when prices for hog products promise to be above the average. One of the beauties of keeping hogs is that the animal consumes almost anything that is offered it. It is a mill that grinds the refuse of the farm into value, and very much that the hog eats, would be thrown away and wholly lost, if it was not thus fed. Therefore, although the corn may be short and the price correspondingly high, swine may be kept growing, of course, without it, and they may get considerable of their fat from food that is worthless for other purposes. Thus the refuse of the farm, under such peculiarly favorable circumstances, will be made worth a great deal, and may make the cost of pork production, even if corn shall be high, comparatively moderate.

When corn is high, of course it is desirable to get our hogs into market as soon as possible, and it will aid us to do this by leaving as little for the corn to do as possible; in other words, let the hog have every advantage which the season naturally gives, and see that nothing is wasted which nothing else but the hog will profitably consume. Hog raisers seem to be greatly favored just now. We hear very little of sickness among swine. There has seldom been so little complaint in that respect as for the last several months. This apparent freedom from disease, however, should not induce swine breeders to be careless of the health of their hogs. Human beings ward off disease by carefully protecting themselves, keeping themselves free from contaminating influences, regulating their diet and keeping cleanly. Animals must be treated similarly if we would keep them in health. If the advice that we have given, to help the hogs growing, were more generally obeyed we should have less "hog cholera." Instead of building up one part of the animal to the neglect of another part, we should then succeed in getting a symmetrical development. The animal would be strong enough to bear the fattening process without injury. The hog should have clean, healthy surrounding, or it will be a marvel if it keeps in health. It should, also, even in apparent health have an occasional dose of charcoal. That will not only do it good by imparting carbon to the blood but it will absorb the injurious gases of the system, which are often the specific poisons that breed disease. There is nothing in this world that is so good for the health of swine as charcoal.—Western Rural.

Food in Tinned Cans.

It is stated by Prof. Helmer, in the London Lancet, that tin, even when quite pure, is much more readily attacked by canned articles of food than is commonly supposed. He has made an examination of a large number and a great variety of such canned goods, finding tin in comparatively large quantities in nearly all of the samples examined. Thus, in the line of acid fruits, as peaches and cherries, the metal was found corroded to an alarming extent. Meats, and even condensed milk, had taken up and become contaminated with sensible quantities of the metal. A can of soup showed the presence of one-half grain of tin to the pound; one of condensed milk, one-eighth of a grain; and a can of oysters, about seven-tenths of a grain to the pound. Prof. Helmer, continuing his examinations in this line ascertained that soda water, and all other varieties of aerated beverages which fell under his observations, and which were conducted through tinned pipes, contained appreciable quantities of tin.

—The Rev. Horace Gates, of Watertown, has accepted a call to the rectorship of Trinity church, of this city. Mr. Gates comes well recommended. He will assume the duties of the rectorship on the first Sunday in December. We congratulate Trinity church on its good fortune to secure the valuable services of Mr. Gates.

—The accident on the Madison division of the Northwestern road, on Monday last, a notice of which appeared in Tuesday's Gazette, occured at Wonewoc, Juneau county, instead of near Madison, as stated. The south bound passenger train struck the caboose of a freight train standing on a side track. Three unknown tramps were killed, and the wreck of cars was one of the worst known in Wisconsin for a number of years. The coroner's jury censured the conductor and engineer of the freight for the accident. The locomotive, baggage and mail car were badly wrecked,—the rest of the damage being done to the freight train, every car being more or less damaged by the shock. The engineer of the passenger train, jumped from the engine, and thus saved his life.

Personal.

—Miss Rose Eytinge and her fine dramatic troupe, have rooms at the Myers house.

—Mr. C. E. Ellison, and his mother, have returned to Janesville from Cavour, D. T. They will winter in this city.

—Hon. Wm. A. Lawrence is much better to-day, and is resting very comfortable, with good prospects of recovering his health, although he is yet a very sick man.

Rose Eytinge To-Night.

Among the notable great dramatic artists of America, Rose Eytinge must be classed as one of the foremost. She stands to-day without a superior on the American boards as an emotional actress. She commenced her career when our stage was a dramatic school of the best. She is now, taught by long study and experience, in the fullness of her power. Now in the prime of life, she still retains the beauty of her youth and also the grace. Her acting is realistic and grand, but always within the bounds of art. She is a lady of culture and refinement, and her accurate conception of the character she portrays, and her superb acting of the part has been fully proven by the great success she has won in all the dramas she has put upon the stage. Be sure and hear her to-night in "The Princess of Paris."

The Weather.

The thermometer at 7 o'clock this morning registered 37 degrees above zero, and at 1 p. m. at 54 degrees above. Cloudy, with strong northerly wind. For the corresponding hours one year ago the register was 20 and 20 degrees above.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23, 1 a. m.—The following are the indications for to-day:

For the Upper Mississippi valley and upper lake region—Colder, cloudy weather, with rain or snow, variable winds, shifting to northwesterly, higher pressure.

The Black Crook.

The Black Crook company will give its first performance at Myers opera house to-morrow evening. As a piece of spectacular work, marvelous transformation scenes, and dancing, it will surpass anything ever before witnessed in this city. The company was at Milwaukee three nights this week, and the performance on Tuesday evening was thus noticed by the Evening Wisconsin: "There was another full house at the academy to see the "Black Crook." The performance was a very great improvement on that of the first evening, and everything passed off smoothly. The connections for the prismatic fountain were not interfered with last evening, and this feature of the entertainment alone is well worth the price of admission. The spectacular features are generally very fine, especially the stalacta grotto scene. The dancing of Boufanti and Ortori drew out prolonged applause. At the matinee this afternoon there was a full house and a large number of ladies were present."

The Free Library Question, and What Has Been Done.

Last evening a number of persons interested in the free library movement, met at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Sheldon, for the purpose of having a free and easy conversation and a frank interchange of views in regard to what had been done and the work there is still to do, concerning the library question. Those present were Mrs. S. F. C. Little, Mr. Albert J. Glass and wife, Mayor T. T. Croft, the Rev. Mr. Davies and wife, Mr. George A. Sutherland, Mr. H. S. Hogeboom and wife, Ex-Mayor S. C. Cobb and wife, Mrs. Hamilton Richardson, Mrs. W. D. Hastings, Mrs. S. C. Guernsey, Mrs. John Watson, Mrs. J. W. Nash, Mrs. Cyrus Miner, Mr. G. Veeder, Miss Lizzie Little, Mrs. M. D. McHenry, Mrs. Lizzie Best, and Mr. N. Smith. The company assembled between six and seven o'clock, and shortly after seven the guests were invited to an elegant spread of refreshments.

It was hoped that all the chairmen of the committees in the several wards would be present last evening but in consequence of previous engagements, two of them were absent. Colonel Burr Robbins and Mr. H. S. Woodruff, who have taken such an unselfish interest in the free library, were prevented from attending the social meeting last evening, on account of business engagements.

The ladies, who have worked so faithfully in the matter—doing what most men would hardly have the courage to do—have thus far secured about $400 by subscriptions, and this amount of money is in their hands. They have paid the indebtedness on the library formerly belonging to the young men's association, and now have these books in their possession. What they particularly desire is to receive a sufficient amount by subscription early this winter to run the library through the coming year—paying for rebinding some of the books, providing rooms, light and fuel, and so on. To do this, and make the library indeed free and practical, the ladies will need more than $400, the amount now in their hands. It is to be hoped that our citizens who have not yet subscribed to the library fund will do so as early as possible, so that there will be no delay in putting the free library association in working order at least for the time being. The ladies will make further efforts to increase the amount of subscriptions and we trust there will be a prompt and generous response to the calls they make.

There were many important and interesting questions connected with the library question discussed last evening which space prevents from giving in full in these columns. In due time they will be thoroughly discussed, and in the meantime let the good work of subscribing go on.

That Conversation.

Last evening a "conversation" took place, or was to have taken place, between the fire boys of Rockford and the members of engine company No. 2, of this city, but in many respects the transmission of the voice was a flat failure. There were too many subscribers to the telephone who were anxious to hear the concert, as our firemen had arranged to give the Rockford boys a chance to hear the best talent in the city, the understanding being that Rockford would send back the best they had. At 7:30 o'clock the two cities were connected, and the "music" commenced, by this and that one asking to be connected with No. 2 engine house. This, of course, weakened the circuit, and at times Rockford could not be heard at all, while at others, the faintest sound could be received. After exchanging congratulations between the two engine houses in this city and Rockford, the gong was struck in No. 2's house, which was plainly heard in Rockford. The Rockford boys then struck their gong, the sound being plainly received here. After this Mrs. J. W. St. John, of this city, was introduced to the Rockford boys, and sang a couple of sweet solos, from her home in the fourth ward, in such a manner as to captivate all listeners. Mr. John Thoroughgood, leader of the Temperance Cornet Band, then played the cornet at No. 2's house, and also brought down both houses in applause. The songs of Mrs. St. John and the solos on the cornet of Mr. Thoroughgood were the only ones that passed over the wires in good shape. the wires being in bad working order, owing to so many being attached. Anderson's orchestra, the glee club, the flute and piccolo solos of Mr. S. B. Clemons had to be ommitted, and finally the whole arrangement was abandoned for some future trial. At about nine o'clock the wires were again connected and the company here and in Rockford timed each other in hitching up. Rockford timed Janesville, and Janesville Rockford. Fire Marshal Larkin gave the time of No 2's hitch at eight seconds, and our time of the Rockford hitch was five seconds. At this time the line worked well, and some very fine instrumental music was exchanged over the lines. Thus the "conversation" ended, but our firemen, who planned the arrangements for last evening are not wholly satisfied, and are determined to try it again, with the hopes of better success.

A Baptist Minister's Experience.

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy; "THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL cured me." I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Electric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and "Thomas Eclectric Oil cured them," and if taken in time it will cure seven times out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough, and if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can, until the Oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their catarrh. For deafness and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine dubbed patent medicine that I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration. I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right limb, and nothing relieves me like Thomas' Electric Oil.

NEARLY A PANIC.

The New York Stock Exchange the Scene of Wild and Prolonged Excitement.

A Stronger Feeling Manifested in Some of the Prominent Stocks at the Close.

Jay Gould's Views Relative to the Situation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—There was great excitement yesterday in the stock market. The aggregate transactions on the exchange were the largest in its history, over 834,000 shares changing hands. At the opening the market showed an improved tone, on the information that several of the large speculators, including Mr. Keene, had met the previous evening and decided on purchasing stocks. It was soon discovered, however, that that gentleman was selling instead of buying, and the result was a rush of orders to part with stocks, which completely demoralized the market, the disposition to sell being further increased by sales of long stock, particularly Michigan Central. Just before noon the situation was such that a panic might have been precipitated, so great was the excitement, and prices showed a decline ranging from 2 to 6¼ per cent. From that time, however, the market steadily rallied, the early decline was recovered, and the market closed at higher prices than Tuesday. The strongest stocks in the afternoon were those which had been weakest in the morning, including Denver & Rio Grande, the Villard, Gould, and Vanderbilt shares, and the coal and granger stocks. In the height of the excitement one stock after another was attacked and the bears in their haste to get the market down ignored factions, and made sales at prices 1 and 2 per cent apart. The decline forced liquidation and demoralized speculations generally. Between 11 and 12 o'clock, when large amounts of long stock were marketed, the leading operators took advantage of the depression to purchase cheaply, and the commission houses were flooded with orders from investors who had been waiting for just such an opportunity as presented itself to acquire stock. Indeed the demand from this source did much to change the temper of the dealings. Throughout the afternoon orders for stocks continued to pour in, and prices advanced from 1 to 6 points. It was stated that prominent officials of the Rock Island and the Chicago & Northwestern roads left Chicago today for New York, and that upon their arrival in this city a conference of the representatives of the granger roads will be held, with a view of terminating the railroad war. The Windsor hotel was crowded to-night with brokers and speculators discussing the day's market and the railroad war. The general opinion was that the war was hardly more than begun, and that it would be a long time before it was adjusted in a satisfactory way. The rumor that the treasury was going to relieve the tight money market here did not gain much credence up town, as it was thought that in the first place the market as yet did not warrant that step, and again that the treasury would not interfere till all other means had been tried.

Jay Gould, in a talk with a reporter, said he thought the decline in stocks had gone further than any element in the situation would warrant. The uneasy feeling as to what the policy of the government might be with regard to the management of the public treasury had arisen, and this uneasiness had resulted in calling loans to a large extent, which necessitated extensive liquidation. For his own part had not been purchasing stocks until within the past week, but was now buying and should continue to buy stocks to hold, as they were cheap enough to pay a good return for those who could take care of them. Gould said the product of the southwest this year was very large, and the business situation highly encouraging. The cotton crop of Texas would reach 1,500,000 bales, and that state had produced an immense crop of corn and wheat. Texas was now exporting more cattle and wool than ever before. Kansas has a big crop, and the same is true of the middle section and intermediate section. In the southeast the railroad rates are being maintained and the roads doing a good business. There is a heavy immigration, and a large number of people are going in by the New Orleans & Galveston.

Speaking of the iron troubles Gould said the chief difficulty was in regard to the Bessemer steel industry, which had a capacity for a much greater supply than the present railroad building of the country demanded. The iron interest was not depressed, and he understood it to be doing fairly well. The Vulcan Steel works at St. Louis would probably shut down partially until they could adjust their differences with their laborers, but there was a demand that would keep the mills running, if not full time, partially, at least.

Keene was interviewed on the speculative situation, and did not hesitate to say he thought it absurd to talk stocks down after the decline that had been witnessed, and with the railroads earning such enormous amounts as at present. He confidently expressed the belief that an era of better days was about to dawn for the holders of stock.

The sentiment of conservative houses in the street is decidedly in favor of higher prices. These views were expressed by Osborne & Co., Musgrave & Co., G. A. Bennett & Co., and by foreign houses generally.
